OLD TIME MINSTREL DEAD.

CHARLES CHRISTY, ORIGINAL "OLD BLACK JOE," PASSES AWAY.

He Was Once in the Support of Forest and Macready, but Turned to Minstrelsy and Made and Lost Several Fortunes.

The angel of death entered the city hos pital at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and stilled the heart of a minstrel whose voice thrilled the audiences of half a century ago with the rich, full melodies of the plantation. Charles Christic, whose name recalls the earliest recollections of burnt cork artists, closed his eyes in the last long sleep. The end came quictly and he looked in death as he had looked in life. except that his face was a little more pallid and his features were more sharply defined. Death was due to dropsy and asthma.

There is not an actor of the "old school" who does not cherish a fond recollection of Charley Christie-"Uncle Charlie," they called him. He was one of the original Christic brothers that made fame theirs and, years ago, covered endless miles of bill boards with glowing letters, heralding coming of Christies' minstrels. When Sol Smith Russell was unknown to fame, he sang in the cabins of Mississippi river steamboats with Charley Christie. "Uncle Charley" was a familiar figure on the streets of Kansas City for many years. He had the entree to all the theaters and he used to cut cards for the traveling actors and actresses. It was "Uncle Charley" who made the song, "Old Black Joe" femous.

"Uncle Charley's" stage career as performer, actor and manager, was a long and varied one. He was born in New York city in 1832, in a little frame house which stood opposite the old Essex street market, near Broome and Grand streets. His father was an Essex market butcher. R. M. Hooley, the late theatrical manager, and "Uncle Charley" were boys together in New York, and were frequenters of the original Bowery theater. He and young Hooley were enthusiastic admirers of all things theatrical and many were the amateur plays which the boys gave in inprovised theaters. On one occasion they built a stare in the basement of the Hooley home and gave a farce called "Robinson Crusoe." "Uncle Charley" took the part of the man Friday, while young Hooley played the part of Crusoe. "Uncle Charley" blacked his face with shoe polish and Hooley used a piece of sheepskin, which be borrowed from the shop of the elder Christy, as whiskers.

Mr. Christy began his professional career at the age of 11, joining Welch & Man's "A London Caravan," which showed in tents and traveled from town to town in covered wagons. His first appearance in a theater was in Buffalo. In 1848 he joined the famous Christy minstrels, of which his uncle, Edwin P. Christy, the original "Christy minstrel," was proprietor. It was Edwin Christy who gave the first "black face" performance in England. "Uncle Charley" stayed with the company only while it was playing in New York appearing as a ballad singer. He left the company for an engagement with Edwin Forrest, playing in the old Astor place theater in New York and the Frederick Street theater in Boston. Anniversary of the Martyr President's Birth Fittingly Observed in Kansas City-Professor Greenwood Talks of Lincoln.

The eighty-eighth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln was celebrated last night by the Grand Army posts at Strope's hall. Ninth and Wyandotte streets. At the Temple, corner of Eleventh and Oak streets, Rabbi Schulman delivered an address on the life and character of Lincoln.

Strope's hall was filled to overflowing with members of the McPherson, George William of the presence of the God of Abraham. "Moses was born of obscure parentage and in poverty; so was Lincoln. Yet in his own country and among his own people, each attained the highest station. When Moses died, "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated," and the same was true of Lincoln. From the standpoint of the human, each seems to have been called when most needed—when on the very threshold of new, useful and even more glorious coreers. Yet who knows?

"Another strikingly suggestive parallel, true alike in the land of Canaan and in America, in Holy Writ finds expression in those words: 'And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses.'

"The death of Moses was pathetic; that of Lincoln tragic; and yet there was an incescribable pathos in the death of Lincoln tragic; and yet there was an incescribable pathos in the death of Lincoln tragic; and yet there was an incescribable pathos in the death of the death of his great prototype: In sight of the promised land, yet not permitted to enter.

Not coover against Beth-peor, but no man know-eth of his sepulchre unto this day.' Not so with Lincoln. A grateful nation of free-men, all in tears, tenderly bore his body from the capital to his old home on the broad prairies of Illinois, and with loving hands there laid away the tall form of that plain and unassuming patriot, who, in sav-ing the Union, brought freedom to Amer-ica's bondmen.' troduced by Major Ross Guffin, who called the assemblage to order. Professor W. T. Vernon, colored, president of Western university, at Quindaro, Kas., delivered a brief, but eloquent address, which was roundly cheered. As a representative of the colored race, he paid a glowing anl grateful tribute to the memory of the martyred president. He was warmly congratulated on the address at its close. lution of sympathy for General Shelby was adopted by a rising vote:

"The Grand Army posts of Kansas City and a large assembly of their friends, in open meeting assembled, on this, the anniversay of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, desire to express our sympathy for the gallant, courageous and generous General Jo O. Shelby and those who are now and have for many days past been gathered in tearful anxiety about the bedside of that grand old hero, and we hope his life may be spared for many years to bless his home and country."

After a song by Captain W. F. Henry, Superintendent J. M. Greenwood recounted a number of very interesting reminiscences of Lincoln. Professor Greenwood's father was an intimate personal friend of Lincoln and Professor Greenwood himself often saw the great emancipator in Springhald III. Miss Norris said that she was only one of about twenty-five girls who had been swindled out of sums ranging from $4 to $25. A few weeks ago Miss Norris read an advertisement in a paper to the effect that 'ladies can secure permanent and remunerative work by calling on Mrs. M. J. Williams, 16½ East Twelfth street." She went to that number and was told that if she would pay $4 for a certain number of lessons in fancy embroidery work she could make big wages by selling her work, after finishing one piece, to Mrs. Williams, the instructor. trembling culprit was brought to justice. Henry Lewis was on trial. He was an inoffensive-looking, shabbily dressed negro, and when he stood up before the justice he shifted the weight of his body uneasily from one foot to the other. A long and carefully worded complaint, charging him with stealing 10 cents' worth of coal from the Bolen Coal Company, was read to him. When the clerk rippled off "willfully, knowingly and deliberately did steal, take and carry away," Henry's eyes rolled in his head, and he looked as uncomfortable as a man going to his own funeral. There was a big array of witnesses. A great deal of testimony was taken—$15 is what it cost the state—and, finally, Henry told his stery. He gave a rambling account of himself, and looked relieved when the justice said, "Thirty days in jail." Henry denies that he took the coal. The court attaches wonder how many years the justice would have given Lewis had he stolen 25 cents' worth of coal.

It transpired yesterday that Curtis Waler, the young man who was reported to the police Thursday night that he had been held up and robbed of $6 near Eighth and Oak streets, was not robbed at all. Waller, Oak streets, was not robbed at all. Waller, whose true name is Peacock, went to poince headquarters yesterday after seeing the account of the alleged holdup in the morning papers, and denied having telephoned in the report that he had been held up. He told Inspector Finhive that Thursday evening Ed Dougherty, a friend, received $6 from his father to pay rent. The money was to be paid to Peacock's mother, Mrs. Waller, who is married a second time, but instead of doing this, De gherty took Peacock out for a good time, spent the money, and then telephoned the police the holdup story to make it appear that he had paid Peacock the money and then the footpads got it. The police did not believe the story at first.
